THOUGHT and COMMENT

CRIME

Admitting that he had held up the bank of Chowchilla, but pleading for his acquittal because he stated that the crime had been committed during a fit of temporary insanity Earl McCrory prominent Chowchilla Business man asked the jury to turn him loose so that he might inflict his next fit of "temporary insanity" upon the public.

Fortunately the jury after seven hours of deliberation found McCrory guilty and he is to be sentenced this morning.

McCrory may not have realized what he was doing, as the paid alienist testified during the trial, but one fails to understand why McCrory did not take treatment for this condition which he stated had existed all his life.

Another peculiar incident connected with the robbery is that the bandit made no attempt to return the $3,000 he removed from the First National Bank of Chowchilla until after the officers were hot on his trail. Its queer how these quirks of the brain act especially in the testimony of paid alienists.

The charges are that McCrory represents the usual mind that turns to banditry. He was honest enough when things ran smoothly for him but the moment financial troubles started to worry him his mind thought that banditry would be the easiest out.

Temporary insanity, maybe, but the same kind with which all criminals are afflicted and not a justifiable excuse for acquittal.

Those who claim that crime is a disease and may be corrected by a proper medical treatment of the criminal may be right, but we do not believe that this cure should take place at the expense of the public by letting the criminal go free for his crimes merely because he paid someone to testify for him that the act was due to a "quirk in his brain."

Temporary insanity is a fact that has been overworked by attorneys during the past few years and it is about time that some plan be instituted to call a halt to this breeder of crime. Public opinion is about the only thing that can accomplish this thing.

FIRE DESTROYS ALL THE OIL IN 20 UNION OIL CONTAINERS

Loss on Big Oil Fire is Expected to Total Nearly $20,000, 000 Officials Say

(By Universal Service)
SAN LEUIS OBISPO, Cal., April 9.—Every ounce of oil in the twenty-five huge tanks that comprise the Union Oil company's tank farm, the largest in the world, two miles east of here, was on fire late today and the properties will be a total loss, estimated by company officials at between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000.

The first area is three miles long and one and one-half miles wide. Cyclonic gas eddies formed in the blazing inferno, and acting in the same manner as a miniature cyclone, struck the home of Bert Banks, a half mile from the fire area and destroyed the place. Fear that the gas eddies may at any moment strike the homes in the vicinity of the fire area, caused the occupants of more than thirty houses, to abandon them.

Fire fighters succeeded in letting loose burning oil from some of the tanks in the hope of quickening the destruction of the oil and thereby avert the present fire peril.

The coast highway has been closed to motorists who are forced to take a long detour. Members of the American Legion are acting as highway guards.

FIRE AT BREA TANKS IS NOW UNDER CONTROL

(By Universal Service)

LOS ANGELES, April 9.—Fought to a standstill by an army of 3000 fire fighters, the great oil blaze in the 55-acre Union Oil company Stewart station tank farm near the town of Brea, in Orange county, was under control late today after causing an estimated loss of $5,000,000.

Three miles of galvanized iron barricades thrown across streams of blazing oil boiling out of the three 750,000 barrel reservoirs, diverted the fiery tide into a pool where it will burn itself out without endangering the 500 homes of the little community.

Pullerton, four miles from the scene, which for a time was threatened by blazing oil flowing into Brea creek, was also saved by the galvanized iron barriers.

The army of fire fighters used great quantities of "foamite," a special oil fire-fighting chemical, ten carloads of which was rushed to Brea from Wilmington today. It was pumped into the three huge reservoirs and 16 surface tanks yet untouched by the flames. While there is still danger of a sudden wind carrying the flames to these reservoirs and tanks, company officials late today were hopeful that a further spread would be prevented.

The fire started yesterday morning when lightning struck one of the big reservoirs and caused a second one to explode. During the night the flames spread to a third reservoir and to the $350,000 Union Oil refinery, which was completely destroyed.

Nearly towns were shaken by the explosion of the oil tanks, and a number of small houses were burned, but no fatalities have been reported.

COMPULSORY RELIGION IN COLLEGES IS CALLED WRONG

Dr. David Starr Jordan Attacks Compulsory Religion in Universities

(By Universal Service)
PALO ALTO, April 9.—"Religion cannot be taught and school instruction in near religious form is useless and even harmful," declared Dr. David Starr Jordan last night at his weekly Thursday evening talk.

"No church holds a monopoly on religion," he continued. "Many of them are simply higher grades of political parties."

"I don't believe in compulsory chapel any more than I believe in compulsory military training. Compulsory anything is wrong—even compulsory Greek or German."

"The idea of a governmental religion that will reward people for being good or send them to hell for being bad has done great damage to the world."

"The teaching of religion in our school which many are urging is quite impossible," he said.

"Such things create antagonism which is the contrary of religion. Religion is the development of human character which is not subject to instruction but comes only through contagion."

"People who do not go to church are often as good as those who do, for religion is deep seated in the life of man but it must be taught by example and influence and not by legislation."

"Compulsory chapel is one reason why Yale is educationally the most backward of the large colleges today."

Unexpected Death Of Judge Hall Comes As Great Shock To City

City attorney D. J. Hall whose death at his Mira Vista home last night comes as a shock to the entire community.

THIRTY-THREE ARE DEAD IN SEA DISASTERS

(By Universal Service)

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 9.—Twenty-six men survived in the Mississippi River following the explosion and burning of the Dutch Oil Tanker Silvanus early today. Seven are dead as a result of the explosion and fire aboard the Standard Oil tanker, O. T. Waring, in Jahncke's dry dock yesterday afternoon.

The two disasters make a record for the port of New Orleans. Captain R. M. Simpson of New Orleans, Chief Mate Fanningwain of Norway, Second Officer J. Farner of Holland and Marconi operator Ludowicz of Holland and 22 members of the crew of the Silvanus died when they tried to leave the ship through a blazing river of oil which was scattered about when the tanks of benzene on the Silvanus blew up.

The Thomas H. Wheeler, Standard Oil tanker out of New York rammed the Silvanus 43 miles down the river and it was daybreak before any details were gathered. The Chinese members of the crew died like rats not knowing how to swim.

M. Johnson, machinist, died at noon today bringing the list of dead in the Jahncke disaster up to seven, the bodies of the six others missing have not been recovered. Standard Oil officials issued a statement placing the loss to the Waring at $150,000 and to the Wheeler at $50,000. The said both vessels would be recommissioned. There are 21 of the Silvanus crew in hospitals here badly burned from the flaming oil while most of those hurt in the Waring explosion at Jahncke are recovering.

The Silvanus is well known here as the ship docked a number of times at the Shell Oil Company's refinery at Martinez. The ship is one of the largest built on the coast for the Royal Dutch Shell. Her first cargo was taken on at the Martinez refinery.

CITY OFFICES TO BE CLOSED

Due to the death of City Attorney D. J. Hall at his home in Mira Vista last night all of the city offices will be closed today according to an announcement made last night by Mayor W. W. Scott.

End Comes After Only One Day Of Serious Illness At His Home Here

CITY ATTORNEY SINCE 1913

Life Has Been Devoted To The Best Interests of City at All Times

Coming as a complete shock to the entire community after only a few hours of serious illness, City Attorney D. J. Hall passed away at his home in Mira Vista last night at 6:30 p. m. The end came after a slight rally, which followed complications of bronchial asthma and infected lungs, which developed a serious stage at 3:30 yesterday morning. In the death of its city attorney Richmond has lost one of its leading and most energetic citizens. Always ready to lend a helping hand and recognized as an able and competent city attorney Judge Hall leaves many friends, not only in Richmond, but the entire state.

About ten days ago Judge Hall contracted what was then considered a bad cold and the announcement of his death last night came entirely unexpected.

Judge Hall was a prominent member of the Harbor Lodge of Masons and the Richmond Lodge of Elks. He was also prominent in the work of the Richmond Y. M. C. A.

Judge Hall has represented the city in all of its important matters since April 1, 1913, when he was first appointed as city attorney. His appearance before the California State Railroad Commission and similar bodies has done much for the city of Richmond. He had an enviable reputation for his ability in street proceeding work and was often called in by neighboring municipalities to assist them in their problems.

He was most active in the East-bay Municipal Utility district and was prominent in the activities of the League of California Municipalities.

Four years ago because of his outstanding work in this city, Judge Hall was elected as president of the Association of City Attorneys of the State.

The early struggles for an education and his ultimate victory over all odds is an inspiration to others. Born in San Francisco on October 24, 1870, he was left an orphan shortly after his birth. He went to live with a family in Humboldt county, which made his home in Arcata and Garberville.

While herding sheep and other work of a similar nature, Judge Hall studied and although his grammar school education had been somewhat neglected, he passed the examination for teacher at Weaverville in Trinity county, when he was only 19 years old.

He taught in the western portion of Trinity county for a number of years, including schools at Weaverville and Lewiston. While teaching at Weaverville he took up the study of law and in 1897 passed the bar examination in San Francisco.

After practicing law in Weaverville for a number of years, Judge Hall was elected as district attorney of Trinity county, which position he held for several years. Upon the death of Superior Judge T. E. Jones in 1904, he was appointed to the unexpired term by the governor of the state. Upon the expiration of the term Judge Hall and his family moved to Redding, where he practiced law for a number of years.

New records were established in many trade and industrial lines in 1925, according to a report just made public by the federal reserve board on economic conditions throughout the country. And these new records of prosperity were established under such conditions that there is every promise that there will be continued stability and progress throughout the present year.

The board especially emphasized the fact that although there was general great activity throughout the year the fluctuation in price levels, in the whole-sale lines was less than in any year since 1913. At the end of the year, despite the heavy movements during the year, the stocks in the hands of wholesalers and retailers were but four per cent greater than at the end of 1924. The amount of building during 1925 was twenty-five per cent greater than in 1924, but the cost of building was no higher and the prices of building materials remained about the same.

"Similarly," the board said, "notwithstanding the increased output of automobiles, which was considerably larger than in any previous year, automobile prices were lower at the end of 1925 than a year earlier."

"The large increase in the volume of productive activity in 1925, especially in manufacturing and building, was thus not accompanied by a rise in prices and indicates a high degree of elasticity in the productive power of industry, which has enabled it to supply an increased demand for its product at a relatively constant level of prices."

The board stated that nearly all the important industries were more active in 1925 than in 1924, with the largest growth in the building industry and in the production of commodities required in the construction and equipment of new buildings.

"Demand for goods by consumers," it stated, "both urban and rural, was sustained throughout the year and we reflected in a large volume of distribution of commodities, both at wholesale and retail."

N. E. W. S.

While we still speak of the Northern, the Southern, Eastern and Western sections of our country, the finest and biggest thing happening is that the administration from the president down is thinking and working for the United States as a whole.

The old sectional feeling, by which those of the East fought for their rights, as did those of the West, is steadily vanishing. In congress today the agricultural problem has become a national one. The best brains of the administration are giving themselves to its solution.

Again the other night in Chicago, Mr. Hoover, who while he hails from Iowa has long been regarded as a distinct cosmopolitan, pledged all the best that was in him to the development of the great inland waterways project which is close to the hearts of the people in the middle and the far-western territories.

At the same time, in Washington, President Coolidge, whose eastern origin is part of his gospel, reaffirmed once again his ambition to see this great work carried on.

With the East thinking and helping the West; with the West fully understanding the East, with the cotton-growers in the South seeking closer affiliations with the cooperative marketers in the North, we are justified in feeling that a great step has been taken for the development of all the energy of the United States for the best interests of all the people, which is as it should be.

REVOLUTION IN THE AIR

That the colonies would be governed only by their own assemblies soon became apparent.

Samuel Adams had been deliberately planning revolution in Massachusetts ever since the troops came to Boston to hold the town quiet while its trade was being strangled, and he went about his plans quietly, but efficaciously. And Virginia was as forward as Massachusetts.

Now in June, 1772, his Majesty's revenue cutter Gaspee was deliberately boarded and burned by the Rhode Islanders.

Naturally the English authorities made an investigation of the matter, but before the royal commission arrived, the colonies had begun appointing committees of correspondence, for the exchange of information concerning public affairs and the maintenance of a common understanding and concert in action.

By the end of the year Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Hampshire and South Carolina had committees at work.

Boston, in the opinion of members of Parliament, was a hotbed of lawlessness. Hence it was that the leaders of the government proposed and carried very drastic measures. They closed Boston by one bill, and transferred its trade to the older port of Salem. If the headstrong town would not have tea, they decided it should have no trade at all. Then they suspended the charter of the colony.

Virginia, much perturbed over the state of affairs in Massachusetts, ordered June 1, the day the Boston Port Bill was to go into effect, set apart as a day for fasting and prayer that civil war might be averted, and that the people of America might be united in a common cause.

A call was issued to other colonies for a general Congress to meet, the first day of the following August to take final measures with regard to Virginia's part in the common action hoped for in the autumn.

But Virginia had not acted alone. Rhode Island, New York and Massachusetts herself had also asked for a general "Congress of Committees."

LESSON IN HOME DRESSMAKING

Long-Waisted Dress with Extended Shoulders. Developed in Figured Silk and Plain Net

Modish Printed Silk

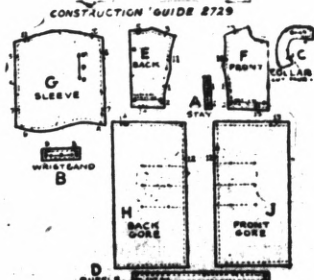

THE printed silks and other materials are so lovely this season that no one will be able to resist the temptation to have at least one dress fashioned of these colorful fabrics. The model pictured is Parisian in every detail, featuring the long-waisted bodice with extended shoulders, and skirt trimmed with little net ruffles. If preferred, however, the frills may be of silk in plain color or of ribbon. Medium size requires 3 yards 36-inch figured and 3/4 yard plain material. About five yards of ribbon would be needed, if used for frills.

The front and back of the dress, both skirt and waist, are cut on the fold of material, as these sections have no seams. If alterations are to be made, be sure to make them in the pattern before cutting into the material. The frills are cut from an open width of silk or net.

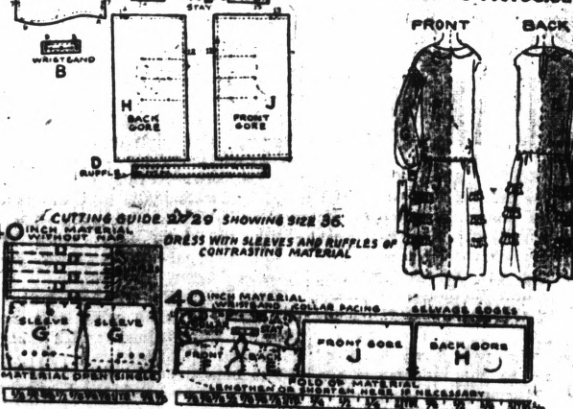

To make the dress, slash down through the fold at the center of the back as far as upper large perforation, and bind slashed edges. Finish for closing. Close underarm seam of waist below the medium perforation in back, leaving underarm edges free below the small perforations. Sew a stay underneath left underarm edge of front, and draw in gathers to fit. Sew remaining stay to left underarm edge of back for extension. Lap, matching notches, and finish for closing.

Next, close shoulder seam, then face collar and sew to neck edge. Join gores of skirt, leaving edges free at left side above the large perforation in front gore, then finish for a placket. Gather upper edge of skirt, leaving center-front and center-back plain. Sew skirt to lower edge of blouse, and add ruffles.

If preferred, the collar may be omitted and the neck finished with a French fold.

Why Girls Go Back Home

CATHARINE BRODY

Copyright 1926 by Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.

"Why Girls Go Back Home" with Patsy Ruth Miller is a Warner production from this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Clifford Dudley, New York's latest pet stage sheik, sued by a chorus girl for breach of promise, goes on a forced tour "of the sticks" and is bored silly until, in the small town of Winesville, he spots a remarkably pretty girl, Marie Doney, in the audience with John, her rural sweetheart. Clifford brazenly makes love to Marie across the footlights. Between acts, John forces Marie to leave the theatre and quarrels with her. Next morning, Marie thinks dreamily of the handsome actor.

CHAPTER II—(Continued)

And of how people could possibly go to sleep at all if that street was brightly lit all night as the papers said, "the street of a million electric lights." She knew she couldn't.

Rat-tat-tat! Ah, that was her father, who, much as the gossip said he spoiled his only child, never let her lie in bed later than nine in the morning. Marie, aggrieved, "It can't be nine o'clock yet."

"It ain't," replied the voice of Mr. Downey, just as aggrieved. "But them New York actors, they gotta catch the nine thirty train out, and they're hollerin' for their breakfast. And the cook's raising a racket that Jane's gotta stay in the kitchen and help her. You get up now, there's a good girl, and wait on 'em."

Jane was the chambermaid and general functionary of the hotel, and very seldom troubled with waiting on table as many as five people at one time. Marie had counted the company. There would be ten this morning. A crowd! A riot! She jumped out of bed. Mr. Downey, hearing the clomp of her bare feet, ambled back to his desk, his duty done.

Ten minutes later, Marie, a marvel of speedy dressing, in her slip on gingham house dress, was assaulted by a medley of various famished demands on the threshold of the dining-room. "Ham! eggs," "Two three minute eggs, there's a good girl," "Aho, there, buttered toast an' a cup of tea." And the character man was hundering in resigned but sepulchral tones: "Three dead men and a couple of eggs!"

A hand, however, reached out and pressed her hand, as she stood nonplussed amid the clamor.

Marie, charmed anew, gazed into the eyes of Clifford Dudley.

Bring tables. Well-remembered tones chimed softly: "Ham and eggs and a cup of black coffee."

Marie, charmed anew, gazed into the eyes of Clifford Dudley. So he did remember!

She flew into the kitchen, grabbed the plate of ham and eggs sacred to the morning repast of Mr. Downey, poured the cup of coffee, and grabbing a napkin and all the cutlery in sight, rushed back to the table.

The idol, drumming hungrily on the table cloth, gave her a sweet smile, and disposed himself to fall to.

Another hand tightened on Marie's arm. "Please, little misset," besought the character actor in his best beggar notes, "would it please you to favor a poor, lone old man with the light of your eyes, an' may it please you, two soft-bolled eggs."

"Two soft-bolled eggs," repeated Marie absently. But her eyes were fixed with anxiety on the idol. He was not falling to! He fumbled on the table cloth, and he sniffed, yes, verily, he sniffed and cast a stony glance in her direction. She flew back across the aisle.

"Aren't the eggs any good?" she stammered.

Clifford, leaning a hand on his chin, looked at her with a sigh of exhausted patience.

"My dear child, how can I tell when I have no fork with which to eat them?"

An anguished, "Oh," came from her soul. What a fool she was!

She looked about madly, dashed to the character man's table, under his blinking eyes abstracted his fork, and laid it reverently by the side of Clifford's plate. He fell to this time without word or smile.

The character man slapped his thigh, and gave vent to a prolonged roar of laughter. Marie retreated on its waves.

Her cheeks hot and her eyes stinging with tears, she sat down on the one kitchen chair and delivered a passionate ultimatum. "I won't wait on people who laugh at me."

"I'd slap his face good and hard or let a cup o' coffee go. That'd teach him," advised Jane, who had had her experiences with travel men.

"Then you go, Jane. I'll help cook."

So Jane went. At this moment a low groan was rising in the dining room. The manager, Williams, had come in. On his usually good-humored face was a scowl, and in his hands was a telegram bearing tidings of their natural pessimism augmented by hunger, moaned inwardly and outwardly and settled back with resignation in their chairs.

"Now what's up?"

"Only this," grumbled the manager and read the wire.

OWING TO EPIDEMIC BOOKINGS FOR NEXT TWO STANDS ARE CANCELLED HOLD COMPANY IN WINESVILLE FOR FURTHER INSTRUCTIONS.

"For the love of two cents' worth of bananas!" cried Sally, the model, viciously flinging down her napkin.

"Anyhow, dearie, we can get some sleep," yawned the character woman.

There was a general epidemic of curses, frowns, flinging down of napkins. Shrugging their shoulders, the troupe began to leave the room. They were of a mind with the character actress, nine o'clock being an hour before dawn in the theatrical circles. The dining room cleared magically, and Jane, coming forth from the kitchen with a belated breakfast, was flabbergasted to be ordered to "bring it up to the room, darling."

"Them actors," she announced in the kitchen, "are a funny bunch. They all went up to sleep again, what do you know, at nine o'clock in the morning! And what's Mr. Downey say, I'd like to know, when I can't clean the room?"

Marie, flushed with ministrations to the cook, made a face denoting scorn and annoyance.

"After all the fuss over breakfast! I hope pop charges 'em double. The big saps!"

She drank a cup of coffee hurriedly over the kitchen sink.

"Here, Marie, that's not all you're eatin' for breakfast!" called the cook.

But Marie had fled. The loud he haws of that character actor had made her too cross for meals. She was beset by a sudden longing for John, who thought these actors were fools, and who was right. She was stifled by impatience, to see him, to cry on his shoulder, to be petted and agreed with. Perhaps now, if she walked down Main Street and lingered near the big window of the Ross Department Store, John would see her and guess and perhaps come to the door. If she gave him time, he was seeking look, and walked on slowly ahead, he would follow—and then—these sappy actors! She fumed herself up the stairs to change her dress.

When she next came downstairs she was a picture of a pretty, graceful child in her best blue silk jumper dress. She stood framed in the doorway of the hotel, where the old trees cast piquant, dappled shadows on her face, and the sun touched her uncovered hair with a golden hand. Clifford Dudley, sunning himself yawningly against the side of the hotel, looked at her with his over-ready admiration for a pretty face. This small town girl was better than none, as Clifford saw it. He straightened up, and lifting his hat with the affected sweep which he used for obviously easy conquests, put himself at her side.

"Oh," fluttered Marie, not quite displeased.

"Do you know that I'm stranded in this town for days?" said Clifford softly.

Marie bridled: "It's not such a bad place to be stranded in."

"How can you think I meant that?" exclaimed Clifford in his most unctuous manner. "What's the complaint of being stranded in a town where you're?" He lifted his eyes to heaven.

The pleased dimple showed in Marie's cheek. She blushed a little. Coyness was the only weapon of coquetry she had yet learned. She was coy.

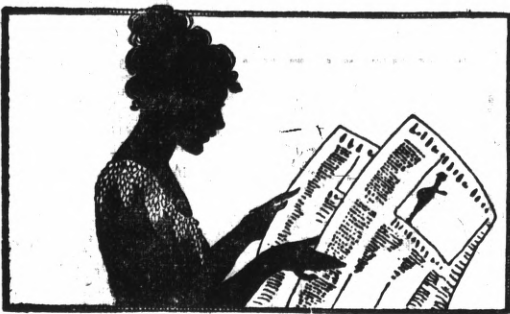

"Oh, Mr. Dudley."

"If you were not the most adorable girl I have ever met, I would ask you to let me walk down the street by your side," breathed Mr. Dudley, "but you are so lovely that you make me shy."

Soviet Russia Frowns At Threatened Baltic Combine; Issues A Sharp Warning

LAURA KNICKERBOCKER
(By Universal Service)
MOSCOW, April 9.—Soviet Russia is frowning over the threat of a Baltic combine, in which the tiny Baltic States, in hinting that they too have been bitten by the Locarno bug, and may form a little league guarantee pact of their own.

The threat of an economic boycott was the Red reply to the proposal. Announcement that a conference of the Baltic States had been called to propose an agreement about the mutual guarantee of all their territories provoked a sharp warning from the Kremlin. This said, "The Soviet government has never refused to talk about guaranteed agreements with the separate Baltic governments. However, it has always refused, and will continue to refuse to negotiate with a Union of these governments, because such an alliance would be unavoidably unfriendly to the Soviets."

The Soviets accuse the participating countries, Finland, Estonia, Latvia and Poland, of having made many efforts to form an entente against Russia, always guided by the master hand of England. This union is considered dangerous by the Kremlin, for these states border on the great frontiers of Russia, and while they might be dealt with successfully alone, they would be formidable in an alliance. The predominance of English influence along the Baltic causes Russia a two-fold uneasiness.

A heavy propaganda campaign was waged last autumn to counteract all the causes for friction, and to show Poland and the Baltic states that their destiny lay in economic co-operation with Russia, rather than as political vassals of other countries. For a time it seemed as if this had borne fruit. Former Commissar Chicherin made his triumphal entry into Warsaw just before the beginning of the Locarno negotiations and rumors of an agreement between Poland and Russia were circulated for the discomfiture of Germany.

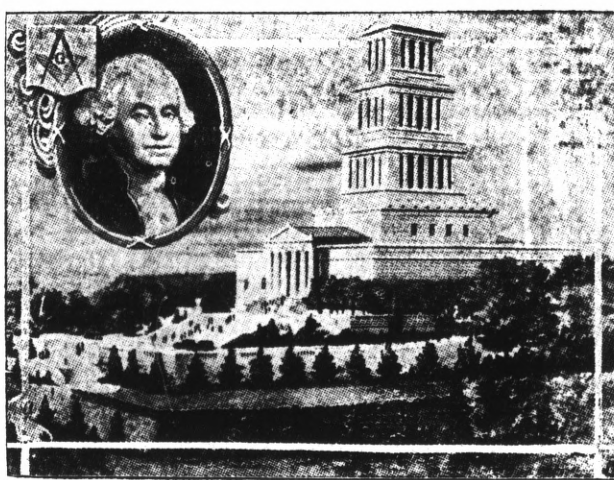

The visit of Finnish, Lithuanian and Latvian delegations to Moscow led the Soviets to believe that the united enemy front had really changed and that the Baltic states were drawing the lost provinces back into friendship with Russia.

But the Soviets, seeing a menace to future co-operation in the coming conference, did not hesitate to make their threat of an economic boycott. This attitude is best expressed in an official statement which ran as follows: "If, after all that has been said, the Baltic Union again makes a call for a conference, the aim and meaning of which is quite clear to us, we have to warn Soviet public opinion to be on its guard."

"We must declare definitely that the economic connection with the Soviet Union, and all its good results, can not be combined with the Baltic Union and all it stands for."

"They must be all for the economic connection with us, or for the Union against us—Baltic diplomats must think this question over."

How the National Masonic Memorial At Alexandria, Va. Will Look When Completed

The National Masonic Memorial in Alexandria, Virginia, as it will look when completed. The construction of the Memorial was started two years ago and will take five years to complete. Masons throughout the United States are co-operating in this wonderful work. In the Memorial will be situated a room exactly like the one in which Washington died, the one in which Washington was lodged at Alexandria. The many precious relics of his administration in Masonry will be transferred to this room which will be as near a duplicate of the original as it is possible to make by a transfer of the original to the building.

Alexandria lies on the highway from Washington, leading through Alexandria to Fredericksburg and on to Richmond, on the way south from the Nation's Capital. It is close to Mt. Vernon, and not a great distance from Wakefield, where Washington was born.

Manufacturers Hold Fate of Nation In Time of War Says Col. H. McNider of War Dept.

CHICAGO, April 9.—The fate of the nation rests with the manufacturers in time of war. This was the statement brought to Chicago today by Col. Hunford McNider, assistant secretary of the National Association of Manufacturers in convention here.

He said: "We were taught in the last war that no nation, no matter how richly blessed with national resources, facilities for rapid manufacture, expert labor and untold funds, can wait until it is suddenly plunged into war to do its thinking and planning."

"That was one of the bitterest lessons of the world war. But now we are prepared. We have the national defense act, which is merely a plan. One sentence in that act—assurance of adequate provision for the mobilization of material and industrial organizations essential to war time needs—gives us all the necessary power."

"But that power is useless without organization. That is the reason that the fate of the nation depends on the manufacturers. We must have your cooperation. This is the first important move to give industry the rightful and all important place in the program of national protection."

"It has become our duty under the law to find out now, when and where we can produce with the least interference the sinews of war."

"There is no thought of the department to tell the manufacturers how to meet the problem. We do not contemplate making plans for the operation of industrial concerns. We ask that they make their own arrangements to meet the war time demands of the United States."

"It is our duty to take to them our requirements that they may solve our questions for us; that they may give us expert aid in the work of co-ordination, so necessary to the successful working of the plans."

"If our plans materialize, it will be the most effective weapon for peace. The plan does not call for the manufacture of a single weapon of war, if everything is so organized that in time of war those weapons can be produced on a moment's notice."

"You (addressing the manufacturers) are helping us to build a structure of emergency insurance, which promises freedom from aggression. It is a frank declaration that we want peace and intend to have it."

Accompanying Col. McNider on his trip here were Major General Charles Saltzman, Major General C. C. Williams and Col. H. B. Ferguson.

VATICAN IS NOW NEAR TO PEACE WITH QUIRINAL

(By Universal Service)
ROME, April 9.—Vatican and Quirinal are closer today than at any time since Victor Emmanuel of Sardinia seized the Eternal City deposed the Pope as a temporal sovereign and became King of Italy.

There is quite a way still to go, as the Osservatore Romano, semi-official organ of the Vatican, observed in an inspired article a few weeks ago, before complete rapprochement can be effected, but both sides are moving toward the goal of amicable understanding.

Of course, the Italian government must make greater concessions than those that are contained in the present amended law of guarantees, which provides for partial upkeep of clergy and churches, and it is certainly inclined to do this if the Vatican pursues the path to reconciliation formally opened by Pope Pius XI. in his famous allocution in which he lauded the government of Mussolini for its co-operation in caring for the great armies of Holy Year pilgrims and in making the Jubilee a gratifying success.

Pope's Policy
In that allocution, it will be remembered, Pius XI. very cautiously commended the policy of restoration initiated (also very cautiously) by the Fascist government, with the time-honored reservation that complete accord could not be reached until the government, expanding its program of conciliation, agreed to a pact which would insure to the church freedom from government interference in its affairs and restore to its head the independence enjoyed by other sovereigns.

It was this reservation, seized upon and exploited in the Osservatore Romano by the Popolare group of deputies (members of the extreme Catholic party) who a few weeks ago were expelled from the Chamber by the will of the premier that led Quirinal and Vatican to the brink of another open war, a misfortune happily averted by the tact of the Pope.

The Osservatore, always a thorn in the side of the government, certainly invited trouble when it subordinated the news of the death of the Queen Mother, Margherita, to mail stories from Jericho and other scriptural places, with a sting in the closing paragraph of the obituary, intimating that the Pope had not sent the great lady his apostolic benediction.

Italians of all types resented this as an insult. Indeed, a very high prelate, denouncing this blunder, recalled the fact that Pius IX sent his own confessor with absolution to the first Victor Emmanuel, adding:

"Surely the present gentle Pope, would not deny to a great, charitable lady (a good Catholic) in her last hour the blessing that he sends in the name of God to the poorest in the land."

When this offense was followed, during the days of national mourning, by articles in the Osservatore intimating that until the Italian government guaranteed temporal sovereignty to the Pope and restored all that had been seized during the 70's there would be no peace, the Fascist Press and orators opened fire.

Gasparri Is Target
Cardinal Gasparri, Papal secretary of state, who is looked upon (apparently without justification) as the Godfather of the Popolare, became the principal target. He was attacked by Farinacci, the official leader and silver tongued orator of Fascism as a "demagogue who in 1926 is still thinking in terms of 1870."

This arraignment of the venerable cardinal was indombed by the Fascist press, a section of which went so far as to intimate that, through the creation of his nephew as a cardinal, the Papal prime minister, was reintroducing nepotism into the church.

Just as things were coming to a crisis, the Pope threw a wet blanket on the Osservatore, which was forced to publish a long article on its first page to the effect that the first duty of a Catholic newspaper is to keep out of national politics.

Mussolini on the other hand, has never said a word in criticism of the Pope, for whom he has profound respect, or, the venerable Papal secretary of state, who has been, to put it mildly, anything but a supporter of Fascism. He simply fixed upon the Popolare group as the source of trouble, expelled them from the chamber, giving them the choice of taking "the road to yesterday" (1870) and remaining out after full apology for their anti-national program, returning, as deputies, to support the government in its work of creating a greater Italy.

Medical Exams For Local School Children Soon

The annual pre-school medical examinations for all children entering the Richmond schools in August 1926, and January 1927, will be held during the two weeks beginning April 19, according to Miss Nora Ashfeld, assistant superintendent of schools.

The examinations which will be held in the Richmond Health Center for the schools are as follows: Monday, April 19, Lincoln school; Tuesday, April 20, Grant; Wednesday, April 21, Grant; Friday, April 23, Belmont.

Saturday, Peres. Monday, April 26, Peres. Tuesday, Peres and Stege. Wednesday, Washington. Thursday, Nystrom. Friday, Pullman and Kinsington.

A staff of physicians who will examine the children is composed of Drs. E. R. Guinan, W. H. Barker, C. R. Blake, W. E. Cunningham, C. L. Abbott and Rosa Powell. The examinations will start at 9 o'clock in the morning.

The state law requires that all children entering school for the first time be examined to determine whether or not they are physically fit and to prevent the unfit from being a detriment to others. Every precaution is taken to immunize those having contagious disease. It is expected that approximately 300 children of the kindergarten and first grade ages will be examined during the period set.

Man Found Dead In Room of Dead School Teacher

(By Universal Service)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass., April 9.—A baffling mystery confronts local police with the finding of the body of Edward J. Walsh, 30, of Utica, N. Y., in the apartment of Miss Caroline C. Kafer, former Junior high school teacher, who died April 3, in Wilkesbarre, Pa.

Whether Walsh died by his own hand, was murdered or died a natural death, medical examiner, Jones, was unable to state. He said Walsh had been dead three months.

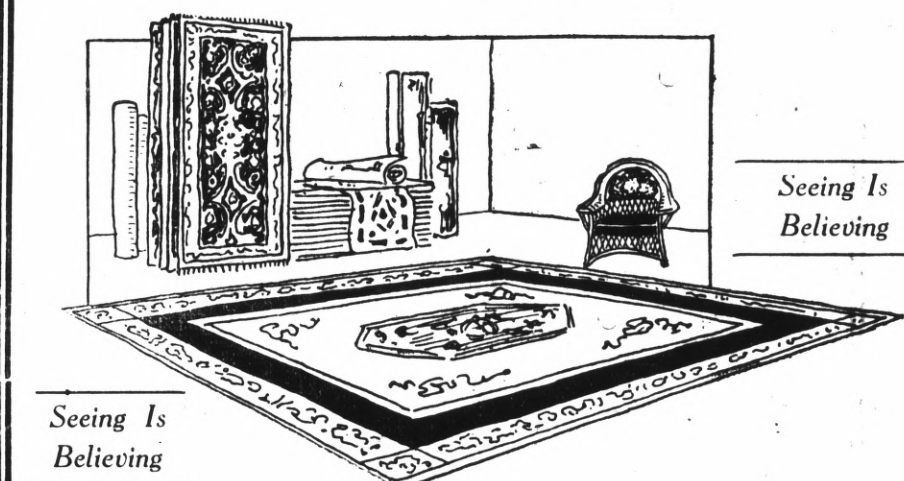

That a romance existed between Walsh and the deceased teacher was verified by neighbors in the apartment house, who said Walsh had been living with Miss Kafer since early last fall. The body was discovered by a brother of the dead girl who had come to claim her personal effects, Walsh, partly dressed, was reclining on a bed. The body was badly decomposed.

Gossard front lace corsets, girdles and corsetlets are featured at popular prices at the corset and hosiery shop.

BASEBALL SEASON ON COAST STARTS IN EARNEST

WASHINGTON DOWNS BEARS IN THREE RACES

(By Universal Service)
SEATTLE, April 8.—Stroking their shell in a manner that made them famous in rowing circles throughout the United States, the powerful University of Washington Varsity crew, with the California Varsity crew trailing by eight lengths, swept down the three mile race course on Lake Washington this afternoon and slid over the finish line and with the Pacific Coast rowing championship riding high in their wake.

A typical Washington crew rowed Washington race which means their opponents were riding in the backwash at the end of the race, while these eight young giants of the northwest were resting on their oars waiting for a less powerful but an exceedingly gamey opponents finish.

The official time given for the three races was 16 minutes 25 seconds for the varsity; 16 minutes, 23 seconds for the Junior varsity, and 10 minutes, 44 seconds for the Freshmen.

The win of the varsity eight made it a complete day of victory for the Huskies. The purple and gold Freshmen having defeated the California yearling by half a length and the Junior Varsity northmen having bested the Bears Jayvees by over a length.

California had but one victory. That scored by her four oared shell this morning and the promise of a strong crew for next year. Delighted at the splendid showing made by the California Fresh and Varsity Junior men against the powerful Washington eights, Coach "Ky" Ebright declared that hope for a championship for California crew for 1927 looks brighter now than ever.

After crossing the finish line amid deafening cheers from the thousands that lined the banks and followed the race in boats the California oarsmen let their shell glide to a stop and almost immediately stripped off their crew jerseys and tossed them good naturedly to the victors. To the victors belong the spoils and for years the traditional coast rivals have wagered their athletic shirts on the outcome of the annual contest. It has been five years since a California Varsity eight has walked off with Washington jerseys. The Bears having defeated Washington last in 1921, when they won by five feet on the Oakland estuary. Since 1903 Washington crews have defeated California 17 times, figuring today's race. The oarsmen from the Golden State, during this time defeated Husky crews five times.

SEALS LOSE OPENER TO THE STARS

For the first time in many moons the Seals dropped the opening game. They did yesterday when they met the Hollywood All Stars at San Francisco. The mighty Seals went down the line by a score of 4-3.

The Stars played a bit more consistently and were steadier at the plate than the Seals. Dick McCabe for the Stars kept well above the game in spite of the zooming base hits that greeted him in the first two cantos.

TWO MAIN EVENTS AT FIGHT ARENA

George Spencer vs. Kid Lovine, Junior lightweights, six rounds.
Joe DeLeon vs. Jimmy Bartlett, 152 pounds, six rounds.

The above is the double main event of the Richmond Athletic Club, box, Tuesday evening. The two six rounders should furnish a lot more action and speed than a long drawn out 10 round mill between two battlers who are usually afraid to open up full speed before the fifth round.

Kid Lovine and Joe DeLeon are stable mates, that is, they are being managed by the same manager, R. Tolentino, a Filipino, and a countryman of Lovine and DeLeon.

The trio recently arrived in the United States from Manila, and manager Tolentino enthusiastically claims that his boys will prove a sensation in this country.

At that, the Philippines have produced some great little fighters, such as Pancho Villa, Elio Flores, Pete Santiago, Young Denico, and many others.

Kid Lovine has a ten round draw with Sarmiento at Manila about a year and a half ago, and is one of the best little men of Luzon Island.

DeLeon, who fights Jimmy Bartlett six rounds or less next Tuesday here at Winters Pavilion, has a fifteen round decision over Irineo Flores at Manila less than a year ago.

In Jimmy Bartlett DeLeon is meeting no setup, as Jimmy has been knocked out by Alvin and Battling Manning, Alger, Manning, and Gray are well known to Richmond fans, as they have boxed here in the last few months.

The rest of the card is of excellent quality and will prove to be a slugging, hard fought bout. Cyclone Pete, the hard punching colored lad from Oakland, who has made a big hit here with his truly cyclonic milling, will meet a real tough hombre in Jimmy West, of Oakland, formerly of Richmond.

West has fought all the waterweights of note up and down the Pacific Coast and will make the Cyclone extend himself to the limit.

Charley Birch, of Richmond, who has licked Jim Lee in a wild and wooly fight here at the last show of the Richmond Club takes on Joe Limas in a grudge fight. The boys love each other like the Kalder like the King of England during the late embargo "over there". They weigh in at 165 pounds.

Fred Hammond of Richmond, whose friends say they he is good takes on Peter Hillo of Vallejo, 122 pounds.

Even Kid Morgan, the MacDonald avenue sheik opposes Bud Korn of Richmond, who are lightweights. Smoking will be permitted starting next Tuesday, according to the management of the hall.

Two new tenants have signified their intention of leasing offices in the new Muller building, near completion at the corner of Tenth street and Macdonald avenue, according to an announcement made by F. A. Muller, owner of the building.

Dr. Francis Kent has leased two corner offices in the building and the Christian Science reading room will occupy two offices on the Tenth street side.

Voters registered to date total 14,984, according to an announcement received from County Clerk J. R. Wells yesterday. Wells states that registration will probably reach the 20,000 mark this year.

To Whom It May Concern: For over a year I had trouble in my gall bladder, pain on my right side, vomiting and a general rundown condition. On February 23rd of this year I had an attack of appendicitis, the pain of which was so severe that I could not sleep at night. I came to see the Chew & Chew herbals and after taking one dose of herbs I was greatly relieved. I continued to take the herbs for a few more weeks and am all well now. March 14, 1926.

ADVICE

Oakland, Cal.
Feb. 26, 1926.
For more than a year I suffered from hemorrhage from a tumor. During this time I was treated by several physicians, all of whom agreed that an operation was the only thing that could help me. Neither my husband nor I liked the idea of the knife.

Upon the advice of my mother who, after having an operation on the right side, the wound forming a fistula which had never healed for 14 years, had found complete relief and fistula healed by drinking the Fong Wan Herbs, I decided to try them.

Owing to my terrible condition and my extremely poor health, it took about six months before I was entirely well. I am now in splendid health and my old trouble have been completely vanquished.

I formerly lived at 1895 Howard street, San Francisco, but have recently removed to Oakland. My phone number is Market 6560.

Coolidge Lays Corner Stone for Nat. Press Club

(By Universal Service)
WASHINGTON, April 9.—President Coolidge qualified today as an expert bricklayer.

Instead of giving the national press club building cornerstone the proverbial "kick and a promise," he worked over the three-foot marble slab five minutes with a trowel, laying the cement in a neat, even layer.

A warm sun broke through the clouded sky and beat down upon the President. He obviously perspired.

"It doesn't stick very well," he commented aloud, as he stirred the cement to give it better cohesion.

"As good a job as I ever say," said Secretary of Labor Davis, who had handed him the official trowel.

Copies of the President's dedicatory speech, of the Washington newspapers and several public documents were placed in a box cemented into the stone.

About 5,000 people witnessed the

Outing and Athletic Club Holds Outing

PINOLE, April 9.—A meeting of the Pinole Outing and Athletic club was held this week, and it was decided to hold a ravaola feed on the 19th of the month.

A dance on the night of May 1 is also one of the social activities of the organization.

The president's speech was broadcast and was heard by the immediate crowd through amplifiers.

The new building will be eleven stories, containing a big theatre and office rooms. It will cost $10,000,000. The Press club will occupy the two upper stories.

Rev. Thomas J. Shahan, rector of the Catholic university, delivered the invocation and Rev. G. C. Bratenohl, Dean of Washington cathedral, the Benediction. Addresses were made on behalf of the American Press by President Frank B. Noyes of the Associated Press, on behalf of the Latin-American Press by Arturo Pelleran of Santo Domingo and on behalf of the public by John J. Edson of Washington. President Urie Bell of the National Press club presided.

DEBS MAY BE BARRED FROM THIS COUNTRY

(By Universal Service)
CHICAGO, April 9.—The statue of Liberty from a distance may be the face of Eugene V. Debs, who has styled himself, "the man without a country."

Debs, who is now in Bermuda is not at all certain that he will be allowed to return to the land of his birth. He is not at all certain that next summer he will see the new moon hang above the banks of the Wabash; or the moon or the scummers that make his Indiana beautiful.

In a letter addressed to George R. Kirkpatrick, executive secretary of the Socialist party and Debs' friend and advisor, the Socialist leader-pines over the fact that his prison sentence has made him a bounded man.

The letter read: "I know I am kept under constant surveillance and I am sure strenuous efforts will be secretly made to bar my entry to the United States."

"It is not that I care in the least, so far as I am personally concerned, what the ultimate sentence will be, but I am profoundly interested in the putting to an end the brutal persecutions and heartless hounding of men who have once been inmates of prison and must therefore have their footsteps dogged and be damned for the rest of their days, and incidentally made criminals in spite of themselves."

"I shall not be surprised if I have to view the statue of Liberty harbor after through the wistful by Bartholdi (who once called me a 'noble American') in New York eyes of an undesirable Alien."

LABOR NOTES

The Central Labor Council of Contra Costa county met at the Labor temple, 231 Macdonald avenue on Wednesday night with President Rogers presiding.

Following is a summary of the more important communications acted upon by the council:

From the Union Labor Life Insurance company stating that they were a strictly trade union enterprise organized and controlled by the trade unions of America and for the benefits of the wage earners, their families and dependents. This company is selling stocks and appeals to organized labor for support. Ordered filed.

From the cooks, waiters, waitresses, cafeteria workers and subordinate helpers, Alliance No. 31 of Oakland, requesting the council to appeal to George Zanes, owner of the Eureka restaurant to comply with the regulations of their organization. The secretary was instructed to ask Zanes to meet a committee of the council in a conference to settle the controversy.

From the same organization, an invitation to the celebration of their 25th anniversary.

From the metal polishers International Union, Local No. 5, of Dayton, Ohio, offering for sale airplane back collar buttons made by one of their needy members. To be disposed of by the council.

From the Moulders and Potters Unions April capita tax were received.

From the Richmond Independent, Record Herald and Labor Journal bills which were ordered paid.

A union card has been displayed in the meat department of the Piggly Wiggly store in Richmond in accordance with the agreement of the Butchers Union.

Mutual aid was the topic for discussion at the last meeting of the fight fighters union.

Every member of the Potters Union will receive a card as member of the Labor Legal Bureau.

The other unions reported progress.

NEW BUSINESS

A committee was appointed by the council to meet with members of the Building Trades council and together draft a resolution requesting the school board and City Council of Richmond to specify in the call for bids on any public work that city jobs must be done by organized labor.

The secretary was instructed to write to every affiliated union asking them to send a full quota of delegates to our meeting of May 5th; the council intending to place an organizer in the field, ways and means to defray the expenses must be found.

Committee on education, Charles Kates, summarized the contents of the Co-operative Bulletin.

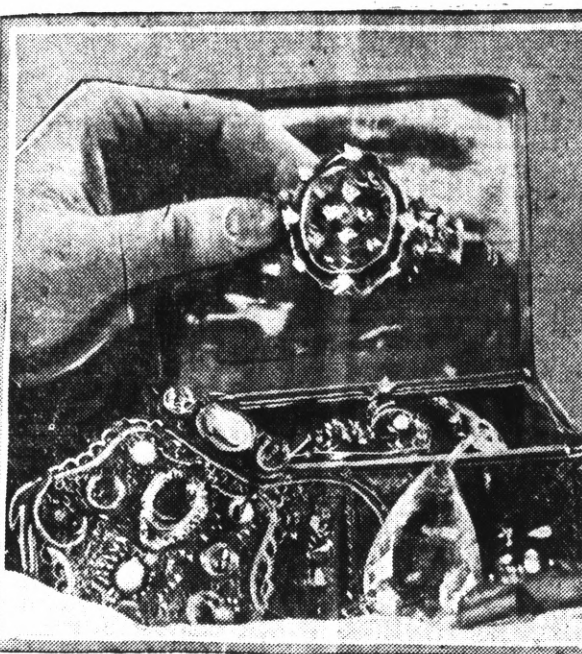

The meeting adjourned at 10 p. m. to meet again April 14.

Respectfully submitted, Jules Scarceriaux, secretary.
